Dear Mr. Childress,

Earlier this week I was driving back to Colorado and needed to spend the night in Utah before making the final leg home. On Sunday morning (Nov 18, to be exact!) I turned on the television, with much anticipation, to watch ESPN since I have no TV reception at my foothills home west of Denver.

Much to my disappointment the program I watched featured you not only hunting elk (on Vancouver Island) but attempting to complete the North American "Grand Slam" of killing 29 different animals around the continent.

To me, and most of the people I know, the recreational killing of animals is a cruel and unnecessary hobby that sends the wrong signal to our children and future generations.

I hope you will take this opportunity to stop hunting, all together, for the benefit of everyone - including your loyal NASCAR fans! Will you do this?

Sincerely,

Roger J. Wendell
